Civil Action No. 3:24-CV-1996-x

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

In this immigration case, the plaintiffs seek a writ of mandamus to compel the defendant to adjudicate Plaintiff Charles Chukwura’s pending I-485 application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status. The plaintiffs contend that the defendants have failed to adjudicate the I-485 application within a reasonable time and request this Court’s intervention under the Administrative Procedure Act (APA).¹ But, as explained below, the plaintiffs have failed to demonstrate why this Court has subject-matter jurisdiction over their claims. The Court accordingly DISMISSES WITHOUT PREJUDICE this case and grants the plaintiffs twenty-eight (28) days to refile their complaint and address the Court’s concerns.

Jurisdiction over these claims hinges entirely on agency discretion, or lack thereof. The APA does not provide judicial review to the extent that “agency action is committed to agency discretion by law.”² The Immigration and Naturalization Act (INA) confers such discretion on executive branch agencies.³ And then the INA strips courts of jurisdiction over individual immigration decisions or actions the executive branch is to make:

[n]otwithstanding any other provision of law (statutory or nonstatutory) . . . and [28 U.S.C.] sections 1361 and 1651 . . . no court shall have jurisdiction to review—

(i) any judgment regarding the granting of relief under section . . . 1255 [adjustment of status] . . . or

(ii) any other decision or action of the Attorney General or the Secretary of Homeland Security the authority for which is specified under this subchapter to be in the discretion of the Attorney General or the Secretary of Homeland Security.⁴

The Fifth Circuit has confirmed that courts are without jurisdiction to entertain such APA claims, and that Section 1252 applies to the government’s “grant or denial of an application for adjustment of status.”⁵

The Court will not proceed amidst such jurisdictional uncertainty. The Court lacks subject-matter jurisdiction to adjudicate what Congress has said it cannot adjudicate, and plaintiffs have failed to present any statutory authority proving the government lacks discretion regarding the actions they challenge. The case is thus DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE. The plaintiffs may refile their complaint within twenty-eight (28) days, which should address this Court's subject-matter jurisdiction over their claims to avoid dismissal with prejudice.
